At least 225 dead after powerful earthquake hits central Mexico

The magnitude 7.1 quake struck shortly after 1 p.m. local time yesterday, caused violent shaking and it flattened buildings and crushed cars and people in the capital, Mexico City, and surrounding areas.

As the sun rose this morning, rescuers with cutting tools and sniffer dogs continued to scramble to reach survivors inside the ruins of offices, schools and apartment blocks. Power cuts left much of the capital in darkness. Many people spent the night outdoors, fearful of aftershocks. Volunteers helped the victims of the natural disaster.

Hurricane Harvey: the worst rainstorm in U.S history

When hurricane Harvey hit Texas on Friday and record amounts of rain fell, more than 30,000 people left their homes and they became homeless. Tens of thousands of people stayed overnight in shelters at the weekend. Some lucky people can stay at their homes, but there is no electric power.

Clean water is also a big problem, increasing the risk of infectious diseases.
